The data comes from several spreadsheets and project management tools, pulled using third-party applications and then placed into the spreadsheet. Because all the data is already in one place, it can be pulled into the performance evaluation file.